WealthBridge, Inc. Privacy Policy

Private Information includes (1) information you provide to us orally or on applications or other forms, (2) information we develop about you in the course of providing our services to you, such as the amount and type of your assets that we manage and transactions we place on your behalf, and (3) technical information we develop and gather through your access to our website (e.g., identifying information communicated through "cookies" stored on your computer). As a general rule, we do not disclose this Private Information to others, unless absolutely necessary to enable us to provide our services to you and/or with your written consent. In addition, we may disclose your Private Information to others with your consent where required by law or judicial process (such as a court order), or otherwise to the extent permitted under the federal privacy laws. We also restrict access to your Private Information among our own personnel to only those who require it to provide services to you, and require contractual assurances that they will maintain the confidentiality of any of your information. We also maintain physical, electronic, and procedural safeguards to protect your Private Information.
